Facebook Takes Down Inauthentic Network Associated with Truth Media

On July 31, 2020, Facebook took down a network of over 500 accounts, groups, pages, and Instagram accounts from around the world that had engaged in coordinated inauthentic behavior using fake accounts and fake identities to spread and amplify their message. Facebook said that the people behind the network were associated with Truth Media, a multinational brand that operates in Chinese, English, Vietnamese and other languages and offers “the light of truth” in its reporting.

The network on Facebook was particularly active in Chinese and English, with smaller numbers of assets in Vietnamese and Indonesian. It used fake accounts, often with profile pictures that appeared to be stock photos, to promote content from its main pages. The network also maintained a presence on YouTube, Twitter, and Pinterest, and it promoted a number of anti-Chinese Communist Party (CCP) websites and petitions, including a petition on the White House website that called for the Covid-19 coronavirus to be renamed the “CCP virus.”

As it announced the takedown on August 6, Facebook said, “This network relied on a combination of authentic, compromised and fake accounts — some of which had been detected and disabled by our automated systems — to evade enforcement, drive people to off-platform sites, comment on their own and other people’s content, and manage Groups and Pages posing as regional news entities. They also spammed Groups with their content, likely using automation. (...) Although the people behind this activity attempted to conceal their identities and coordination, our investigation linked this network to Truthmedia, a digital media outlet. Truthmedia is now banned from our platforms.”

Facebook also said that the network “showed some links to on-platform activity by Epoch Media Group and NTD” (New Tang Dynasty TV). Facebook found the network “as part of our internal investigation into suspected coordinated inauthentic behavior that showed some links to the network we removed in December 2019.”

Before the takedown, Facebook shared a list of the publicly visible assets with Graphika for an independent assessment.
The Truth Media Network

Truth Media is a collection of websites in Chinese, English, Japanese, and Indonesian. According to its own description, it "originated from a pure and kind-hearted dream: let the truth spread to the world, and let everything show the original and pure truth." The Truth Media website does not provide ownership details.

The website's primary focus is on China, Hong Kong, and Taiwan: it has separate sections for mainland China on one hand and Hong Kong and Taiwan on the other, and it covers the rest of the world under the banner "overseas." Its section on "the truth" offers a range of stories that attack the governance of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP).

Truth Media is broadly active across social media platforms: as of August 4, 2020, it featured YouTube channels in Chinese, English, Japanese, and Vietnamese, together with a presence on Instagram and Pinterest. Its Chinese-language Twitter account was suspended before August 4; as of the same date, an English-language Twitter account was still active. The latter account largely posted links to YouTube videos from conservative American outlets, alongside content from the Epoch Times and New Tang Dynasty (NTD).

Facebook said that it found “some links to on-platform activity” by the Epoch Media Group, among others, in the takedown set. As discussed below, Truth Media assets regularly cross-promoted content from the Epoch Times and shared a number of its ideological positions, notably opposition to the CCP and support for the Falun Gong movement.

In December 2019 Facebook took down, for coordinated inauthentic behavior, a network based around a brand called “The Beauty of Life”; this network was reportedly linked to the Epoch Media Group. Facebook said that the inauthentic activity was linked to the Epoch group “and individuals in Vietnam working on its behalf.” The Epoch Media Group denied any involvement in that inauthentic network.

The Takedown Set

The set of assets that were taken down on July 31 consisted of 181 Facebook pages, 303 accounts, 44 groups, and 31 accounts on Instagram, which is owned by Facebook.

The followings of these assets varied widely. Among the Facebook pages, the most followed was @TheTruthComing: at the time of the takedown, it had just over 430,000 followers. Another page, @DiyaKhanLive, had over 320,000. At the other end of the spectrum, a set of what appear to have been amplifier pages (accounts largely created to “boost” the content of other pages) with names like @Truth50, @Truth51, @Truth52, and so on, had fewer than half a dozen followers each.

The Facebook groups were less successful in building up a following. The one with the most members, called “We love truth and beauty,” had only 478 followers. Twenty-six different groups had fewer than 10 members each. Similarly, the Instagram accounts had only modest followings. The most popular, @pureessenzooil, had just over 2,700 followers when it was taken down; more than half of the Instagram accounts that Graphika reviewed had fewer than 100 followers each.

The creation dates of these assets varied widely. The oldest Facebook page, @FatBurningFoods, was set up in October 2011 but was an outlier in this set, which mostly contained more recent assets. Eleven different pages were created on September 1, 2017. Each of these pages was named “Truth” plus a geographic designator, such as “Truth-India” and “Truth-South America.” Another 18 pages were created in October-November 2017, and 17 different pages were created between May and July 2020.
Creation dates of the Facebook pages included in the takedown set.

Facebook accounts do not show when they were created, but using the date of the first visible profile picture can serve as a proxy to indicate the probable creation date. Using this method to analyze the accounts in the takedown set, Graphika identified a bump in creations in late 2015 and early 2016 and a larger bump in early 2018. Some of the accounts served as administrators on pages that were created before the accounts posted their first profile pictures; it is unclear whether this means that the accounts were created earlier but did not have profile pictures at the time, or that the accounts were created later than the pages and were used to replace or supplement earlier administrators.
The groups on Facebook ranged in age even more widely: the oldest was set up in February 2009; the most recent was created in April 2020. Seven of the groups were created on one day, on October 12, 2018; they were all listed as having the same administrator. Six more groups were set up in July 2019.

The bulk of the assets posted in English, Chinese, or both. For example, among the Facebook pages, 25 were predominantly in Chinese, 29 were primarily in English, and 8 pages switched between the languages. Still other pages were in Indonesian, Vietnamese, and Portuguese. This language breakdown also largely reflected the locations from which the pages were administered, which included the United States, Indonesia, Vietnam, New Zealand, Australia, Canada, Hong Kong, and Taiwan.
The network purchased advertising on Facebook. One page, Truth Media 真相傳媒 (the Chinese text means Truth Media; the page’s handle was @TruthMediaInfo), focused on Chinese readers with the advertising paid for in Taiwan Dollars. At the time of the takedown, this page had one ongoing ad, started on July 28, 2020. According to the Facebook ad library, which has preserved the ad, it spent between 100 and 199 Taiwan Dollars, and pointed to a YouTube video from a channel called the “Global Service Center for Quitting the CCP” (discussed below).

The video was most shown in Shan State, Myanmar, and Johor, Malaysia. In an indication of how widely spread the network was, the ad library shows that it was also viewed in Singapore, Phnom Penh, Manila, Yangon, Ho Chi Minh City, Addis Ababa, Podgorica, and Belize.
Key Narratives

Anti-CCP

The network of accounts in the takedown set systematically criticized the Chinese Communist Party, attacking it on multiple fronts, including for its treatment of the Falun Gong movement and the Uighur minority in the province of Xinjiang (subject to grave, systematic human-rights abuses) and for its response to the Covid-19 pandemic. These are criticisms of the CCP that have been made by many authoritative voices, not least human rights organizations including Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch; it is important to emphasize that the takedown was based on inauthentic activity, not the content of the posts.

Some of the accusations were graphic, notably the claim that the CCP was harvesting organs from Falun Gong and Uighur prisoners to feed the trade in body parts. This is an accusation that the Epoch Times has repeatedly highlighted since at least 2006; an archive of a website launched by the Epoch Times includes the claim that “we were the first to report on the state-sponsored forces organ harvesting in China — one of the most underreported atrocities of our time.” (In fact, a letter campaign from Amnesty International as early as 1995 condemned China’s practice of harvesting organs from executed prisoners.)

Minority and Opposition Persecution

Other content from the network focused more generally on China’s violations of human rights, especially its treatment of minorities. One of the pages in the network was called the “World Organization to Investigate the Persecution of Falun Gong”; many assets posted about reports of torture and other abuse in China. Such posts also included support for the pro-democracy protesters in Hong Kong.

Posts about the “Hong Kong People Fighting for Freedom,” left, and the CCP’s suppression of religious freedom, right.

Covid-19

Many posts across the network, in multiple languages, accused the CCP of covering up or otherwise distorting the outbreak of Covid-19, whether by concealing its existence in the early days or by downplaying its impact on the Chinese people. Truth Media is not alone in this stance: many international outlets have reported in detail on China’s early response to the outbreak, including its decision to silence a doctor who raised the alarm.
Content suggesting that China lied about or otherwise manipulated its Covid-19 numbers, posted by assets in the takedown network. Throughout this report, we have blurred the identities of accounts that either did not belong to the network or that may have been taken from authentic users.

Some posts went further and accused the Chinese government of creating the Covid-19 virus in a weapons lab — an accusation that has been repeatedly dismissed by medical experts. (The accusation mirrors an equally debunked claim promoted by Chinese officials and media that the virus originated in an American lab.)

Posts by two pages of the same text that claimed that the coronavirus outbreak originated in a Chinese lab.
On some occasions, the network referred to Covid-19 specifically as the “CCP virus,” a fact we will return to below. Elsewhere on the Truth Media collection of social media assets, a YouTube video that the outlet ran on March 14 also referred to the virus as a bioweapon.

Left, Facebook post boosting an image that called Covid-19 the “CCP virus.” Right, still from the Truth Media video, calling it a bioweapon.

U.S. Politics

Although not the main focus of this network’s activity, some of the pages and accounts posted content about U.S. politics. For example, several posts supported President Donald Trump. This content went beyond Trump’s criticism of the CCP and focused more broadly on his political and personal character. Such content presented Trump as China’s best hope against the Chinese Communist Party and praised his foreign policies toward Beijing. A significant number of posts focused on Trump and Hong Kong, seeing Trump as leverage in favor of Hong Kong against Beijing.

As was typical of this network, apparently inauthentic accounts amplified content from pages that were branded as part of the Truth Media group, creating an inauthentic booster network.

Other posts referenced the Black Lives Matter movement and the anti-racism protests that swept America after the police killing of George Floyd. Some of this content reported claims that the Chinese Communist Party supported the movement.

Cross-Platform Amplification

The network’s anti-CCP content was not limited to posts on Facebook and Instagram. Several of the assets in the network shared content from websites that were explicitly dedicated to attacking the CCP. These included tuidang.org, endccp.com, preventccp.com, ccpvirus.com, and a petition on the White House website.

Tuidang.org is the website of the Global Service Center for Quitting the CCP, a not-for-profit organization registered in 2005. Its name means “to withdraw from the Party”; according to the website’s own account, it was created after the Epoch Times published a series of editorials known as the “Nine Commentaries” that accused the CCP of censorship and tyranny and called for Chinese citizens to leave the party.

As noted above, the last paid ad to be run by Truth Media 真相傳媒 pointed users toward the Global Service Center’s YouTube channel, which was created on May 8, 2020. The video in question included a screenshot of the Global Service Center’s contact details, including the domain tuidang.org and an email address at the domain epochtimes.com.

The website endccp.com was a much more recent creation. It was registered on January 21, 2020, and featured a petition to “eliminate the demon Chinese Communist Party”; it was copyrighted to the Global Service Center for Quitting the CCP and linked back to tuidang.com. As of August 4, it featured a video montage of historical atrocities by the Party, notably the Cultural Revolution and the Tiananmen Square massacre. The video also referred to the Covid-19 pandemic as the “CCP virus.”

Still from the video embedded in the endccp.com website, showing the reference to the “CCP virus.” The video was uploaded some time after July 24, 2020: it referenced the death toll due to coronavirus on that date.
Rejectccp.com was more recent still: it was registered under privacy protection on May 8, 2020. The site was copyrighted to the Epoch Times and featured a second anti-CCP petition, together with a live tracker of the number of people who have quit the CCP. Hovering the mouse over this live tracker revealed a hyperlink to tuidang.org.

The Truth Media takedown set also posted links to two other websites that referred to Covid-19 as the "CCP virus." The first was a website called ccpvirustruth.com, which was registered on March 20, 2020; as of August 4, it redirected to rejectccp.com. At least one Indonesia-focused account in the Truth Media network posted a link to the website on May 6, showing its original branding and connection to the Epoch Times. An archive of the site taken on April 25 also showed that it was copyrighted to the Epoch Times.
Post by network asset “Soesy Fx” pointing to ccpvirustruth.com. The text reads, “Investigation of parties responsible for the spread of coronavirus. Please help sign this petition! Select ‘Indonesian’.”

The second property was a petition on the White House petitions page titled “Let’s start calling the novel coronavirus the CCP virus.” This was created on March 20, 2020, the same day that ccpvirustruth.com was registered. The following day, the same account that posted in Indonesian about ccpvirustruth.com shared a link to the White House petition.
Signs of Inauthenticity

Facebook took down the network of Truth pages and associated accounts for coordinated inauthentic behavior, which means the network was sustained by false users coordinating to promote a given message. Most of the accounts that Graphika reviewed displayed signs of inauthentic and/or coordinated behavior, such as reposting the same posts at the same time or using made-up personas to amplify content from the network’s pages and hijacked accounts.

The majority of the content that this inauthentic network amplified came from branded pages belonging to one of Truth Media’s language services, or else from posts about the Falun Gong, or from the Epoch Times’ Facebook pages and websites. As such, the essence of this network appears to have been artificial enhancement by the covert network of inauthentic accounts of the overt Truth Media assets and of assets with which it was ideologically aligned.

Recycled Profile Pictures

Roughly half the takedown consisted of Facebook accounts. Some appear to have belonged to genuine individuals, either employees and supporters of Truth Media or users whose accounts were taken over and repurposed. Many, however, showed strong signs of inauthenticity. For example, a number of accounts displayed images of young Asian women, Instagrammers, and models as profile pictures. These pictures can be easily traced back to social media, if not to the original source, and a simple reverse search shows that they are widespread across the Internet and sometimes belong to Asian social media influencers.

Using recycled imagery in this way is one of the oldest and most common ways of disguising inauthentic accounts.
Left, assets in the takedown set, showing their profile pictures. Right, reverse-search results for the same images, showing the sheer number of different uses. Most of the image search results directed users to Chinese-language social media and blogging platforms.

These pictures were also used on various Western social media accounts such as Twitter, LinkedIn or Facebook as well as on Chinese social media platforms, where they displayed many different names, which suggests the presence of further fake accounts using these pictures for profiles.
Stock Pictures of Children

A substantial number of assets used photos of children as profile pictures, taking images from sources that included the AliExpress clothes modeling site and Instagram.

In the case illustrated below, the persona “Todd Virgil” used a female profile picture stolen from a student whose picture featured in an online article.
Coordination

Some of the assets in the network also showed strong signs of coordination. This manifested in a number of ways; for example, as mentioned above, the network included pages called Truth51, Truth52, Truth53, and so on, suggesting they belong in an organized set. Some of the accounts in the network re-posted the same content on the same day and close to the same time, suggesting a coordinated effort to boost said content.

Video posted by two different assets in the Truth Media network, then shared by two more. The video is branded with the Truth Media logo and also appears on YouTube.

Some of the pages that used @Truth plus a number as their handle were especially clear in their coordination. The pages @Truth38, @Truth50, and @Truth51, for example, all live-streamed the same Truth Media video; their broader collection of videos was almost identical, too.
Videos by @Truth38, @Truth50, and @Truth51; note how many videos are common to both pages, and note that the upper left video is shown as a live-stream in both cases.
Profile Likes

The accounts showed a pattern in their page likes. The accounts very largely liked pages from Truth Media, Epoch Times, NTD, and pages supporting Falun Gong; some also liked conservative voices in the United States or pages posting nature and animal content. The specific pages and outlets liked also reflected the campaign’s narrative interests, such as pages related to organ harvesting in China and interest in U.S. politics, specifically on the American right. For example, one account had page likes for Project Veritas, a California Republican group, and a San Diego political campaign. The focus on Falun Gong was apparent throughout.

Likes by another network account. Note how they include multiple Truth Media pages, the Epoch Times, and another page on organ harvesting.
Repurposed Accounts

On some occasions, the operation made use of accounts that appeared to have been taken over from their original owner or were resold if they were operated by commercial operators. These were identifiable from the way their posting histories showed sudden changes in content, focus, or behavior. In one example, an account that was called 李美宝 (Li Meibao) at the time of the takedown had a URL that included the name “Alex G,” suggesting that it had been renamed and repurposed from an earlier owner.

Username and URL for the account lately known as 李美宝.

In another example, an account called Jin Zhang promoted Fruit of the Loom products in June 2014, then fell silent for some years.

Last posts from asset Jin Zhang in 2014. The assets posted this same content dozens of times that day.
Finally, on August 8, 2017, the account added a new profile picture, a cartoon image; after this, the account’s content turned political, though mixed with seemingly innocuous travel content, often from Truth Media-related assets.

First post by "Jin Zhang" after profile pic swap and seeming account hijack, leading to a page called @TruthOfWorldTrip, an account sharing only Epoch Times and NTD content.

The network assets with the highest numbers of friends appeared to be authentic assets from the Philippines that were either willingly repurposed or hijacked.
Examples of three Filipino accounts that were either hijacked or willingly repurposed to share Truth Media content. As visible above, the three accounts stopped posting between April 14 and April 17, 2019, and then began sharing Truth-U.S content four months later almost at the same time. After they began to engage with Truth Media, the accounts all posted the same content in the same order. All the seemingly hijacked accounts had over 4,500 friends at the time Graphika analyzed them.
Updating Name with Language

A unique quirk that Graphika observed across multiple assets was a recent change in their naming convention. Primarily in April 2020, the page names were altered: the name of the page was listed in both English and the language that the content primarily used, or the language of the content was added; for example, if the page primarily posted in Chinese, it would be added using the Chinese character set to the original English title. This behavior was notable as it was present even in pages that were not overtly branded to Truth Media.

Examples of the name change pattern observed, both occurring on April 11, 2020
